Released in 1998, this four-issue miniseries written by Jeph Loeb and beautifully illustrated by Sale takes readers on an emotional journey through the various seasons of Superman's early life.

The story begins with a focus on Clark Kent's childhood in Smallville during the spring season. Sale's art brilliantly captures the essence of this idyllic rural town as Clark discovers his superhuman powers and struggles with his place in the world. The picturesque panels transport the reader to fields of golden wheat, with the warmth of sunlight filtering through the pages.

In the summer season, as Clark transitions into his young adult years, Sale's art takes a bolder approach. The colors become more vibrant, and his iconic rendition of Superman starts to take shape. As autumn arrives, we witness Superman's rise as the protector of Metropolis. In this season, Sale's illustrations expertly capture the intricate details of the cityscape, from towering skyscrapers to bustling streets. The use of shadows adds depth and intensity to the artwork, emphasizing Superman's ever-growing commitment to defending humanity.

Finally, we reach the winter season, where the story reaches its emotional climax.
